Show me: Comic Strips

Friend A: Did you see the comic strips in La Nación?

Friend B: No. I didn't buy the newspaper this week.

Friend A: It was so funny. Many people on the web shared the comic strips.

Friend B: What was it about? Was it about Garfield or Mafalda or any other funny caricature?

Friend A: It said that Mafalda was arguing with her mom.

Friend B: Yes! As she usually does.

Friend A: In the image, Mafalda asked her mom why she has to do that chore.

Friend B: God! But she is so lazy

Friend A: She has no ambition. If I were Mafalda, I would never talked to my mom like that.

Friend B: Who's the cartoonist?

Friend A: I don't know. The artist is from Spain, I think.

Friend B: If I were a cartoonist, I would write about social problems instead of misbehavior.

Friend A: Yes. You could write about positive attributes.

Friend B: Yes, I would create characters with more optimistic characteristics.

Friend A: If you do so, I would like to make the layout.
